DESKTOP GENERATION Dealer Program Moves To ISD

To achieve a synergy with the Information Systems Division's (ISD) Systems Supplier Program, responsibility for the DESKTOP GENERATION Dealer Program has been shifted to ISD from the Desktop Division.

The DESKTOP GENERATION Dealer Program is now under ISD's Systems Supplier Program, directed by Dick Farwell. The Systems Supplier Program is Data General's value added reseller (VAR) marketing and support program for the business and commercial markets.

"Desktop computer dealers who have been successful tend to be more like VARs and original equipment manufacturers (OEM) than traditional personal computer dealers who carry products such as the IBM PC and the DATA GENERAL/One," says Dick.

"Shifting marketing and dealer responsibility for the DESKTOP GENERATION products to ISD allows the Desktop Division to better focus its attention on marketing the DATA GENERAL/One family of personal portable computers," says Allan Oppenheimer, acting general manager of the Desktop Division and director of Dealer Programs.

Data General Moves Up In Fortune 500

Data General has climbed to 279, up 56 notches from last year, on Fortune Magazine's annual listing of the 500 largest U. S. industrial corporations, based on fiscal 1984 revenues.

With sales of $1.2 billion, Data General is ranked as among the largest Massachusetts-based corporations. Other area companies listed on the Fortune 500 are:

- Raytheon (Lexington) - 58
- Digital (Maynard) - 65
- Gillette (Boston) - 160
- Wang (Lowell) - 165
- Polaroid (Cambridge) - 263
- Norton (Worcester) - 272
- EG&G (Wellesley) - 291
- M/A Com (Burlington) - 363
- Dennison Manufacturing (Framingham) - 384
- Prime (Natick) - 400
- Computervision (Bedford) - 436
- Foxboro (Foxboro) - 455
- Wyman-Gordon (Worcester) - 495

Other computer firms listed within the Fortune 500 ranking are: IBM, 6; Honeywell, 56; Hewlett-Packard, 60; Sperry, 69; Control Data, 71; Burroughs, 76; NCR, 97; Pitney Bowes, 217; Apple, 234.

Data General's 40 percent sales increase from 1983 to 1984 was the 25th highest increase of any firm listed within the Fortune 500. Rank based on revenue is just one part of the report issued by Fortune Magazine each year. For instance, the company ranked 189 in net income and 206 employees.

Stock Certificates Will Be Mailed Home

Stock certificates resulting from stock option exercises will be mailed directly to employees' homes from Data General's transfer agent, Morgan Guaranty Trust Company of New York, beginning April 29.

Because of the administrative change, certificates will be received several days earlier than in the past. A letter reflecting your exercise and tax information will be sent from the Stock Option department. It should be retained for tax files.

Employees who want their certificates sent to an address other than their home address should notify the Stock Option department. Certificates will be mailed to the address indicated on your letter of exercise unless otherwise notified.

For additional information call the Stock Option department at extension 6620 in Westboro.

Business Automation Solutions Offered

Data General this week announced two joint marketing agreements to benefit the company's business automation customers.

The first, made with Equatorial Communications Company of Mountain View, California, makes available low-cost private data communications networks by integrating Equatorial's large-scale satellite networks with Data General's CEO Comprehensive Electronic Office software, ECLIPSE MV/Family and DESKTOP GENERATION systems.

The combination will allow customers who require data transmission to construct and control their own private data networks linking computer systems via satellite at hundreds to thousands of locations.

Customers also will be able to develop their own business applications through the use of EXSYS, the world's first expert system for software development. The system will run on the ECLIPSE MV/Family of computers and operates within the CEO Comprehensive Electronic Office environment.

Conventional software development is a slow, four-step process - analysis, design, programming and testing. EXSYS slashes the time and cost of software development by introducing the power of an expert system into the development process at the first step, analysis, and eliminating the design, programming and testing steps.

EXSYS communicates with the user in plain English, asking questions about the user's organization and system needs. When the last question is answered the system is complete and ready to use. EXSYS builds systems directly, making prototyping tools, program generators and fourth generation languages obsolete.

The software was made available exclusively on Data General equipment by an agreement with Exsys, Inc., a Data General Independent Software Vendor (ISV). ISVs are an integral part of the company's business automation solutions. These solutions combine an integrated work environment, a broad, flexible range of hardware systems and communications capabilities to link the entire system together.

$156,000 In Equipment Given To Pikes Peak College

Pikes Peak Community College's Clarence Emenheiser and Monique Amerman look over computer equipment given to the college recently by Data General. At right is Fountain, Colorado Plant Manager Vinu Patel who participated in the presentation.

Trumpeting "a strengthened partnership" with education, Data General donated $156,000 in computer equipment to Pikes Peak Community College in Colorado Springs early this month.

College officials said the equipment, three NOVA-4 mainframes and seven MP-100 computers, would enhance the advanced electronics technology program.

"It will be used in the advanced systems program, which deals with trouble-shooting and maintenance of computer-assisted control processing equipment and in the electro-laser optics program," says Don Goodwin, dean of occupational studies. "We envision it supporting the computer-assisted drafting program. It is extremely powerful equipment," Don emphasizes.

Data General decided to donate the equipment to the college when 14 Pikes Peak graduates were hired at the Colorado Springs plant when it opened in 1982, according to Vinu Patel, plant manager for the Fountain branch. The graduates and the Occupational Studies department made company officials aware of the lack of advanced computer equipment at the college, Vinu says.

Those employees who are active participants in the program will see the contribution reflected on the regular quarterly statements. All statements will be mailed to employees' homes in May.
